“Master” plans provide you the modified or original in any way to meet your needs.

1. Distribute for display is the list of research topic choices. Master choices include, and have students choose the one they want to research. This list can be shortened, lengthened, or replaced entirely as you see fit. With some choices I feel I need no further reading their choices, and with some general or advanced choices, I let the students choose any topic they want. It’s entirely up to you.
2. Once each student has a topic, distribute the “BC-WF-L” chart. Have the students write their topic exactly as they see written on the page, or “subject” the page for “topic”. Next they should remain in the form of a question. Have the students results in this case in the form that they may say, “But I don’t know anything about this.” Add to it, “Do you know that they form the clouds? Yes? Then just go on to a question about it.” Then the students have their topic ready. In the next few, they will write out their topics they have just learned about the topic. These will be the other two columns that will form the back of the “body” paragraphs. They will have the third column for the “head”.
3. At this point, we have learned a great deal of research. I emphasize that when they are “Google-ing” their topics, they should look for “articles” and “publications” — academic journals and such. I emphasize “articles” than “posts” are safe, non-Wikipedia. Also, when I tell them this, I repeat that “Google-ing” can be a good research tool but it’s not the only one. If they click the source cited at the bottom of the article, they can verify that source and determine if they want to click on that particular site. <https://www.google.com/search?q=check+credible+sources>
4. This is another problem, or who? — I say the “Google Drive”, but you could also print and hand out a handout and the person that you tell you about doesn’t have access to Google Drive. Similarly, you could also be skeptical, that you “Google” a topic and get “unsafe” pages — it’s just really easier to click documents through Google Drive. I wrote a file I called “Research Paper Document.” I then share it with each student. Each student uses it to RE-USE-ONLY mode so that they can’t edit the master copies of any of the documents. Within that folder, I replaced the pages called “Source Document”, the page called “Google Drive”, the page called “Nursery Works” “Child Pages”, and the page called “Research Paper Master”. Once they’re replaced, I right click each one and get the “Open with Google Drive.” Once they are connected to Google documents, you can delete the Word versions that you opened. You can do these all at once, or one at a time respectively as the students only get the document they need at that particular time.
