Observation

Notes or Comments

Chris is playing with a toy. He says, "Kelly, can I keep it?" several times until he gets an answer. He moves on to a toy guitar and plays it while he supervises the other children by walking around the room. He tells everyone to sit down at the tables after the teacher says to.

Chris is polite to others.

Chris is helping his classmates follow the rules.

Chris sits by a friend and talks about eating granola bars. He watches and listens to the conversation on either side of him. He's still unaffected by the loud temper tantrum of another child. Then he notices her and watches. He tries to explain this behavior to the others by saying a plant was spilled.

Chris is interested in what others have to say.

Chris tries to make sense of a child's behavior.

He follows the teacher's directions. Then he decides he wants to be in on a secret. A boy shoves him away. Chris informs him that he can hear if he wants to. This has caused him to disobey the teacher. He has to sit out of the circle. He walks over to the chair, sits down, gets up immediately, and comes back to the circle undetected by the teacher. He joins the circle.

Chris chooses appropriate ways to assert himself.

Early Childhood Education Petr G. Grotewell, Yanus R. Burton, 2008 This book focuses on early childhood education which spans the human life from birth to age 8 Infants and toddlers experience life more holistically than any other age group Social emotional cognitive language and physical lessons are not learned separately by very young children Adults who are most helpful to young children interact in ways that understand that the child is learning from the whole experience not just that part of the experience to which the adult gives attention Although early childhood education does not have to occur in the absence of the parent or primary caregiver this term is sometimes used to denote education by someone other than these the parent or primary caregiver Both research in the field and early childhood educators view the parents as an integral part of the early childhood education process Early childhood education takes many forms depending on the theoretical and educational beliefs of the educator or parent Other terms that is often used interchangeably with early childhood education are early childhood learning early care and early education Much of the first two years of life are spent in the creation of a child s first sense of self or the building of a first identity Because this is a crucial part of children s makeup how they first see themselves how they think they should function

how they expect others to function in relation to them early care must ensure that in addition to carefully selected and trained caregivers links with family home culture and home language are a central part of program policy If care becomes a substitute for rather than a support of family children may develop a less than positive sense of who they are and where they come from because of their child care experience

Observation and Participation in Early Childhood Settings Jean Billman, Janice A. Sherman, 2003 This text was written to give students experience in using effective methods for observing young children's development ages 0-8 and documenting their observations Designed to guide students participation with children of different age groups in a variety of early childhood settings the text encourages students to interact with children as they learn more about development by carrying out the activities outlined in each chapter This text models the educational approaches that professionals advocate for early childhood classrooms observational learning active learning guided discovery choice mini lessons and cooperative learning These approaches are incorporated into this text through concise overviews and numerous activities related to early childhood development and education

Teaching Styles as Related to Student Achievement David L. Silvernail, 1986 In the last decade considerable attention has been directed to the question of how teachers may increase the academic performance of their students This monograph summarizes the research findings and suggests some underlying principles of effective instruction Recent research has reinforced findings that teachers who adopt the principles of direct instruction increase the academic engagement time of students and this leads to greater achievement Teachers who focus on academic goals structure learning activities and provide clear academically oriented feedback create a businesslike learning environment which enhances time on task and achievement This monograph introduces the basic principles of effective instruction and lists selected sources which provide concise summaries of more recent research reports Also included is a list of 191 selected references JD
