(10 marks)

- (1) It's not 'cool' to be fat, but that has not prevented an obesity epidemic from occurring among America's youth. Childhood obesity increased from 5% in 1964 to about 15% in 1994. Today, it is about 20% and rising. Children, on an average, spend up to five to six hours a day in sedentary activities like watching television, using the computer and playing video games, which is partly to blame for this escalating rate. Perhaps, it wouldn't matter if they were sufficiently active at other times, but most of them aren't. To make matters worse, children are bombarded with TV ads from fast food chains and other purveyors of high fat, high sugar meals and snacks. These highly effective advertising campaigns, combined with a physically inactive lifestyle, have produced a generation of kids who are at high risk of obesity-associated medical conditions.
- (2) The major health threat is the early development of Type 2 diabetes (adult onset), particularly in children with a family history of disease. Doctors are reporting a surge in young adolescents developing Type 2 diabetes which can lead to heart disease, high blood pressure, kidney disease, stroke, limb amputations and blindness. People who develop diabetes in adolescence face a diminished quality of life and shortened life span, particularly if the disease progresses untreated. It's a scary prospect for our children, but, in many cases, obesity and diabetes are preventable.
- (3) When children are spending most of their free time sitting in front of televisions and computers, they are not outside running, jumping or engaging in team sports that would keep their weight down. Parents need to set limits on the time their children are engaged in passive activities.
- (4) Pediatricians recommend restricting children to one to two hours per day on TV and computers combined – though older children may need additional time for learning activities. Parental involvement remains the most important key to our children's healthy diets. Programmes to educate parents about nutrition are essential. Fast foods should be consumed only in moderation. Caregivers, who are often busy and harried, must avoid the temptation to whisk their kids into fast-food restaurants or to pick up fast food for dinner at home. Changing eating habits and lifestyles is not easy, but the health benefit for our children is a wonderful payoff for parents willing to take on the task.

Collipp,1980 Abstract The biological and psychological bases of childhood obesity and obesity treatment programs are described in 28 papers for school physicians and community pediatricians The treatment programs discussed cover diet exercise and behavior programs group and public school programs and medical and surgical programs Current thinking also is provided in discussions of skinfold measurements genetic predisposition to obesity correlations between parental social class and obesity persistence of childhood obesity into adulthood diet design for the obese child and the resurgence of nutrition education and exercise programs in public schools wZ ULALA: THE MANCHESTER GRAMMAR SCHOOL MAGAZINE. OCTOBER 1880 uLula,1880 Three Essays on the Economics of Health Yleana Pamela Ortiz Arevalo,2007 This thesis consists of three essays that investigate issues related to the economics of health All three studies examine the case of Mexico and draw on the first wave of the Mexican Family Life Survey 2002 The first two essays focus on school age children and the second on women In the first essay I look for evidence of increasing overweight evaluated in terms of body mass index BMI and examine possible contributing factors I find that prevalence of overweight increased for both boys and girls in recent years To look for factors that may contribute to this increase I propose a theoretical model of a mother s allocation of food and time from which I obtain her reduced form demand for weight adequacy of her child I empirically estimate this demand measured as the probability that a child is overweight Results indicate that contributing factors to the growth of overweight in children are i increases in mother s BMI and in community median BMI of male adults and ii particularly for boys less presence of father at home and an increase in maternal labor supply In the second essay I study the effects of maternal education on hemoglobin levels and possible consequences of anemia among children Childhood anemia may impair physical growth weaken the ability to fight infections affect the development of motor and learning capacities and reduce physical performance and endurance All of these have potential negative consequences on school functioning accumulation of human capital and future labor productivity Results point out to positive effects of maternal education I find evidence of maternal education being endogenous and possibly contaminated with measurement error There is evidence suggesting that maternal education might be related to public health services through a substitution effect Results also reveal that mother s labor supply is negatively associated with hemoglobin levels In the third essay I examine whether sexual and reproductive behavior of Mexican women changed due to public initiatives promoting birth control and family planning launched in the 1970s I use a variety of indicators to characterize sexual and reproductive behavior first sexual encounter first and second pregnancies and utilization of contraceptive methods To identify the effects of public programs I make use of individual exposure to in school sexual education and to birth control promotion in public health facilities Results suggest that in school sex education increased the hazard of first sexual intercourse but did not affect the hazard of first pregnancy Both sex education in schools and exposure to campaigns in public health facilities decreased the hazard of a second pregnancy There is also some evidence supporting positive effects of sex education on the use of contraception methods
