Color Psychology Paper

Research Questions:

How does color affect one's mood?

Review of Literature:

Colors may just seem simple and unimportant, but they affect our daily lives more than we may know. If someone is feeling angry, it could just be because they're angry, or it could be perhaps that they are surrounded by or looking at the color red. That's right! People's moods can change just because they are looking at different colors! There are many theories on how just a simple color can change one's whole mood.

According to Johnson (2007), color does affect mood by producing certain chemicals and stimulating different feelings such as hunger. For example, blue can make one feel calm because it releases calming chemicals, and red can make one hungry because it is an appetite stimulant. Yellow can make one feel irritated, and it is a fact that people lose their temper most in yellow rooms. However, pink is tranquilizing and can make one feel weak. In conclusion, Johnson says that depending on the color, one's body can do things (like producing chemicals) that cause a certain emotional reaction (mad, sad, etc.).

Another idea, by Smith (2007), is that the effect color produces is based on what one's body does in response. For example, yellow is mentally stimulating, and activates memory, whereas red increases confidence. Also, brown can make a person feel orderly and stable, while a dark blue can make one feel sad. Therefore, Smith says that different colors do in fact change one's mood and the consequences can be negative or positive.

A third writer, Wolland, (2000) seems to think that color can affect one's mood, but the effect also can depend on one's culture and what one's personal reflection may be. For example, someone from Japan may not associate red with anger, as people from the U.S. tend to do. Also, a person who likes the color brown may associate brown with happiness. However, Wolland does think that colors can make everyone feel the same, or close to the same, mood. According to Wolland, pink reduces aggression, which is why the walls of the jail cells in the Seattle prison are pink! Also, brown can make one feel comforted. Wolland feels that colors do affect one's mood, but there are other factors that can alter what one is supposed to feel.

Eric, John, and Parasg's (2007) main point about color psychology is that color has both a physiological and psychological effect. For example, green makes people feel relaxed because it relaxes their muscles and makes them breathe deeper and more slowly. Furthermore, blue lowers blood pressure, which makes one feel calm. Eric, John, and Parasg conclude that color affects one's mood because of what it does to the body.

The role of parent-child interactions in developmental psychopathology:

methodological and intervention challenges and opportunities Rebecca Pearson, Tamsen Jean Rochat, Bronwyne Coetzee, 2025-03-06 Parenting research has always faced substantial methodological challenges, assumptions, and stigma, limiting understanding and translation to more family centred support. In addition, the focus of most research has focused on the early years with far less knowledge about the role of parents in pre adolescence, adolescence, and the transition to adulthood or beyond. Parenting work lacks diversity with regards to inclusion across cultural settings and is usually limited to mothers; the role of fathers, grandparents, adoptive and foster parents, and step parents is under represented. Current advancements in technology and data science as well as cross cohort collaboration enabling pooling of observed parent-offspring interaction in larger numbers provides opportunities to bring together new understanding. In addition, enabling the voice of diverse parents with lived experience throughout the research process will enhance the meaning and interpretation of findings.
