The Stanford Graduate School of Business (GSB) requires only two essays of its candidates, though its long-standing first essay question — about “what matters most” to applicants — is one we have seen many people struggle with over the years. The largely open-ended nature of the prompt often stymies candidates, who understandably want to avoid making any wrong moves in their application. The GSB’s second essay question is comparatively straightforward, asking applicants to explain why they have chosen the school for their MBA, but crafting the best possible response will demand some thorough research into what the institution offers and an ability to clearly show a connection between certain resources and the candidate’s unique personality and needs. With a 1,050-word total allowance for the school’s two required essays and 1,200 characters (not words) for its optional short-answer question, applicants need to be judicious in selecting their desired messages and succinct in conveying them. (The admissions committee states frankly, “We
