

Emma Lloyd speech, Waterside Open 2012

Firstly I would like to say thank you to the judges, organisers and the sponsors of this competition and exhibition. Such a brilliant event would not happen without the time, dedication and support of everyone involved.

I must say it is an honour to be invited to speak here tonight as the winner of 'Best in Trafford' at the Waterside Open 2010. It is lovely to be back for the event this year and to see that the competition is yet again well supported by the community, both here and beyond.

It is a great opportunity for artists to showcase a select portion of their practice and discover what others are creating.

It is also an inclusive opportunity, inviting the whole community to enter work for consideration. I believe this is an important step to take. Art is everywhere, manifesting itself in various different forms.

Within these walls this is reflected by an exciting, diverse selection of the creative 'now'. For some, a platform such as this develops the confidence needed to take a creative journey further.

Being involved in the nurturing of young talent in art education has enabled me to understand the importance of encouragement. Gaining exposure and further insight in to art through exhibiting can help to drive, focus ambitions and lead to the achievement of one's goals. Anything that boosts artists and their careers in such a manner deserves to be applauded!

Speaking from my own experiences, the competition opened up more of what was happening in this area. I quickly found out about Creative Industries Trafford and the support that is provided through workshops, talks and group critique sessions.

There is an extended community, connected through creative process and thought. Within this you can discover so many interesting points of reference and a diverse world view. Art functions as a catalyst: bringing people together and forming new modes of connection. The experience of art reveals itself in such events to be equally as important as the practice of it.
