In 1911, 25 reindeer (also known as caribou)—4 males and 21 females—were introduced onto St. Paul Island, one of the Pribilof Islands in the Bering Sea near Alaska. St. Paul Island is approximately 106 km<sup>2</sup> in size (41 square miles), and is more than 323 km (200 miles) from the mainland. On St. Paul Island, there were no predators of the reindeer, and no hunting of the reindeer was allowed. Study the graph below and answer the questions.

Miller,1976 This paper examines the winter range of barren ground caribou in north western Manitoba in order to learn what potential forage is available and how weather in particular snow conditions affect the foraging behaviour of caribou Potential forage was determined from standing crop and percentage cover of green plants and lichens in study plots Feeding caribou were observed and plants were collected from feeding craters and enclosures Further evidence and confirmation of observed feeding habits were obtained by analysis of rumen contents Results of climatic measurements especially of snow depth and crust hardness were used to explain changes observed in caribou diet Aerial photographs evidence of rates of lichen recovery and knowledge of feeding habits allowed some general conclusions to be drawn about the capability of winter range to support caribou
