

Generating C code from control schematic with the click of a button

The SimCoder Module provides the capability to generate C code automatically from the control schematic.

In most applications, control algorithms are implemented in microcontroller chips. Requirements are placed on the logic of controllers to control and monitor the ICs. These requirements are often met by generating control code. Most control codes are prone to being used without any documentation, resulting in rework.

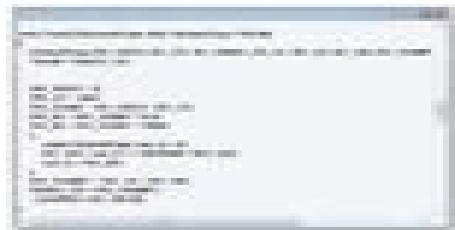

Automatic code generation, on the other hand, offers complete and well-documented control codes. After the control logic is specified in a schematic, the C code is generated automatically with the click of a button, providing ready-to-use code of a high-quality. Also, a code can be generated automatically for documentation or quality control purposes.

SimCoder, together with a C compiler, is a complete design tool for generating C code. SimCoder uses generated code that is ready to use on any application. This provides the user with a complete alternative to handwritten code generation or reworking design logic. Generated documentation and functionality implementations, such as generating keywords and their documentation, are always present.

FEATURES & BENEFITS

- Automatic code generation, no programming skills required.
- High-quality and maintainable code with no human errors.
- Handsome code generation together with keywords.
