Postapocalyptic Fiction and the Social Contract Claire P. Curtis,2010-07-17 Postapocalyptic Fiction and the Social Contract We ll Not Go Home Again provides a framework for our fascination with the apocalyptic events The popular appeal of the end of the world genre is clear in movies novels and television shows Even our political debates over global warming nuclear threats and pandemic disease reflect a concern about the possibility of such events This popular fascination is really a fascination with survival how can we come out alive And what would we do next The end of the world is not about species death but about beginning again This book uses postapocalyptic fiction as a terrain for thinking about the state of nature the hypothetical fiction that is the driving force behind the social contract The first half of the book examines novels that tell the story of the move from the state of nature to civil society through a Hobbesian a Lockean or a Rousseauian lens including Lucifer s Hammer by Larry Niven and Jerry Pournelle Alas Babylon by Pat Frank Malevil by Robert Merle and Into the Forest by Jean Hegland The latter half of the book examines Octavia Butler s postapocalyptic Parable series in which a new kind of social contract emerges one built on the fact of human dependence and vulnerability

Reading Chinese Science Fiction in the Age of Techno-Nationalism Fontaine Lien,2025-11-11 This book is a comprehensive examination of contemporary Chinese science fiction sf under the framework of Chinese techno nationalism aimed at introducing the genre to both general and academic readers and providing new in depth perspectives on work that has been published in the early twenty first century While China has made technology an important pillar of its external power projection and internal management strategy this book approaches contemporary Chinese sf as a complicated mode of both aspiration and subversion within the sphere of techno-nationalistic discourse. Using a general theoretical framework informed by the emergence and dominance of global neoliberalism this book locates Chinese sf as part of a world literature that is concerned with class inequality, exploitative capitalism and the ways in which new technology contributes to these problems. For those interested in the state of contemporary Chinese sf and its scholarship this book also provides a review of recent developments as well as emerging trends. Its thematic chapters are organized in terms of different types of responses generated by techno power and techno-nationalism: sf that addresses traditional Chinese culture and myth; sf that ruminates on the way China wields power internally and externally; sf that considers global concerns in terms of Chinese responsibility; and finally sf that critiques authoritarianism and censorship.
