referred to as whiskey geeks or shiners taking many of the same risks that traditional moonshiners did But the modern hobbyist isn't into it to make a profit In many cases it can be cheaper to buy mass produced booze right off the shelf Of course you are wondering if they don't do it for the money why take the risk Some view it as a tantalizing hobby while others see it as way to connect with their heritage and still others view it as a way to stay independent and keep essential skills alive I believe most of them are looking to produce a product that tastes better than mass produced booze being sold in stores This guide book will give you a beginner's level education about the world of distilling First I will talk about how alcohol is produced methods of distillation and diverse ways to age and improve your product We will also look into common types of spirits and check out some recipes that home distillers are using to make their own Lastly we will go through the entire process of fermenting distilling and aging of your own spirits Download your E book Home Distilling Guide Making Whiskey Vodka and Rum Recipes and Techniques by scrolling up and clicking Buy Now with 1 Click button DI, Drinks
