Sending or reading a text message takes your eyes off the road for about 5 seconds, long enough to cover a football field while driving at 55 mph.

3s

Of all crashes, over 90 percent involve driver inattention within a 3-second window of the crash.

  9 KILLED, OVER 1,000 INJURED

Each day in the U.S., approximately nine people are killed and over 1,000 are injured in crashes that involve a distracted driver, according to the NHTSA.

Some studies suggest that texting while driving is worse than driving drunk. In fact, a recent Car and Driver study tested the reaction times of an unimpaired driver, an unimpaired driver sending a text and a legally drunk driver. The legally drunk driver traveled four feet more than the unimpaired driver before realizing the need to brake, while the texting driver traveled 70 extra feet.

When you choose to text while driving, you're choosing to put the lives of every single driver around you at risk. What's more, people who drive for work are more likely to use a telephone while driving than during their personal time, according to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA).

Papers On Texting And Driving:

Studies on Distracted Driving Alva Oletia Ferdinand, 2013 This three paper dissertation addresses gaps in the literature focused on distracted driving and the impact of regulations aimed at reducing its prevalence. With the widespread proliferation of mobile phone usage and more sophisticated in-vehicle entertainment and information systems it is now commonplace for drivers to engage in non-driving activities also referred to as secondary tasks while driving. It is widely believed that distracted driving is positively related to motor vehicle crashes and other undesirable driving outcomes. This dissertation specifically focuses on three topics: 1) the nature of the distracted driving literature given the numerous secondary tasks driving performance outcomes and study settings examined and used by researchers; 2) the impact of text messaging regulations on motor vehicle crash related fatalities; and 3) the impact of text messaging regulations on motor vehicle crash related hospitalizations. The first study in this dissertation is a systematic review of studies that examined the relationship between selected distracted driving activities and various driving performance outcomes. It quantifies the proportion of existing studies that have focused on specific distracting activities (mobile phone use, cigarette smoking, listening to music, etc.) and specific driving performance outcomes (e.g., crashes, injuries, fatalities, following distance). The first paper also identifies the types of studies that are more likely to find detrimental relationships between secondary tasks and driving performance outcomes. The second paper in this dissertation examines whether states that have prohibited text messaging while driving have seen decreases in motor vehicle crash related fatality counts. Because text messaging restrictions are nuanced across states, this paper will additionally determine whether more stringent and comprehensive restrictions result in the greatest decreases in fatality counts. The third paper of this dissertation will determine whether states with primarily enforced text messaging restrictions have seen decreases in motor vehicle crash related hospitalization counts.

An Investigation of the Effects of Reading and Writing Text-based Messages While Driving Joel M. Cooper,Christine Yager,Susan T. Chrysler,2011 Previous research using driving simulation crash data and naturalistic methods has begun to shed light on the dangers of texting while driving Perhaps because of the dangers no published work has experimentally investigated the dangers of texting while driving using an actual vehicle Additionally previous research does not clearly differentiate the dangers associated with reading and writing text messages To address these issues 42 participants drove an instrumented research vehicle on a closed driving course Participants drove under a control text reading and text writing condition Baseline text reading and writing data were also collected outside of the research vehicle Results indicated that impairment associated with texting while driving may be greater than previously thought Principally when reading or writing texts drivers exhibited reductions in reaction time that were nearly twice as great as previously thought Drivers also exhibited nearly identical impairment in the reading and writing conditions suggesting that both reading and writing text messages may be equally dangerous These results have immediate implications for improving our understanding of the dangers of texting while driving and may be useful for future public policy discussions
