Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 10-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during maximal exercise at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during maximal exercise compared to the control group. The control group had no significant change in HR and HRR. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

- At low water velocities, the drag is longer than the standard drag coefficient, while at high velocities the velocity dependence of the drag coefficient disappears. In sum, that is the drag is independent of the velocity of the flow.
- At low velocities the drag is not completely without the velocity, the standard drag coefficient, the length of the column may differ depending on the wall-mounted apparatus.
- Do not forget the many flowlines. The drag force is the product of the pressure difference, the surface area of the object. To achieve the same drag force, the pressure difference is the same, but the surface area is different.
- For the drag coefficient, the drag force is the product of the pressure difference and the surface area.
