The Northern Goshawk in Utah Russell T. Graham,1999 This assessment describes northern goshawk Accipiter gentilis habitat in the State of Utah. Because of fire exclusion insect and disease epidemics timber harvest livestock grazing or a combination of these factors the forests and woodlands of Utah have changed drastically since the early 1900's. Forests are now dominated by mid and late successional species Douglas fir white fir and subalpine fir rather than the early successional species lodgepole and ponderosa pine. Along with these changes came suspected declines in goshawk populations. Goshawk habitat in Utah was assessed using potential vegetation types current vegetation types and expert knowledge. Subalpine fir 17 percent and quaking aspen 10 percent potential vegetation types were the most common forest types in the State. Nearly 95 percent of the subalpine fir potential vegetation type was rated as high or medium for nesting habitat while nearly 90 percent of the quaking aspen potential vegetation type was rated as high or medium for nesting. Similarly combining nesting and foraging preferences 70 percent of the subalpine fir potential vegetation type is rated as either high value or optimum habitat. In addition throughout Utah all of the high value habitats are well connected. The present conditions of the forests and woodlands of Utah are prone to insect and disease epidemics in addition to the risk of stand replacing fires. To ensure the goshawk's continued existence in Utah will require the restoration of these degraded habitats and the protection of native processes.

The manual was developed to provide biologists and resource managers with background information to facilitate the application of sound raptor management practices on project lands. While the literature is cosmopolitan references are applicable to species found in but not limited to the Pacific Northwest. Approximately 4 000 citations compiled through 1983 are included. General guidelines on raptor management and survey techniques are provided. An outline of techniques is given for habitat assessment development and management applicable to Federal lands and recommendations are provided for management needs regarding various land use practices and recreational activities. Basic procedures for conducting raptor nesting surveys migration counts and winter surveys are outlined. Raptor studies conducted on project lands in the US Army Engineer Division North Pacific are summarized.
